Online CME/CE Activities Now Available Inspiring New Jersey's Heroes for LIFE!

Today, close to 5,000 New Jerseyans wait for organ donations to save their lives, and countless others for life enhancing tissue donations. Each of these individuals depends on ordinary citizens to make the bold, selfless – and yes, heroic decision to provide life to another through organ and tissue donation. Unfortunately, such heroes are small in number, as misinformation and preconceived notions can deter people from making the heroic decision to become a donor. Although 95% of the national population indicates support for donation, a far smaller percentage actually makes the legally binding decision to become organ and tissue donors. The lack of available organs for transplant has resulted in the deaths of over 2,470 New Jersey residents since 1997.

In response to that challenge, the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey - Center for Continuing and Outreach Education (UMDNJ-CCOE) has partnered with The New Jersey Organ and Tissue Sharing Network, Gift of Life Donor Program and the Discovery Institute for Medical Education (DIME) to develop an innovative education program that will guide physicians, nurses and other health care professionals through the complex, and sometimes emotional topics related to organ and tissue donation. By educating clinicians, we hope to provide the confidence and understanding they need to counsel patients to make informed and appropriate decisions for themselves and their families. By promoting life-giving choices, we aim to turn skeptics into advocates, cynics into optimists – and ordinary people into heroes.
